Social Media and Political Narratives on Migration Training Course

Introduction

In today“ÇÖs digital-first society, social media platforms play a transformative role in shaping po discourses, and molding public opinion. Narratives around migration are amplified through Twitter (X), Facebook, TikTok, and Instagram, where digital activism, political campaigns, and misinformation collide. Social Media and Political Narratives on Migration Training Course equips learners with the knowledge and tools to critically analyze and strategically engage in narrative framing, digital storytelling, and migration politics. Participants will explore the intersections of media power, political messaging, and migration identity to understand how narratives shape policy outcomes, electoral influence, and public attitudes.

This training blends academic insights with practical case studies, real-time analysis, and digital strategy workshops. By the end of the program, participants will be empowered to identify propaganda techniques, develop counter-narratives, and leverage data-driven communication to foster inclusive discourse on migration issues. With a mix of social media analytics, political communication, migration studies, and digital diplomacy, this course prepares learners to become change-makers in reshaping conversations about migration in both national and global contexts.
