Shareholder Rights, Minority Protection and Corporate Disputes Training Course

Introduction

Shareholder Rights, Minority Protection and Corporate Disputes Training Course is designed to equip participants with the legal knowledge, governance expertise and practical skills required to protect shareholder interests, strengthen corporate accountability and manage complex shareholder disputes. This course explores the legal and regulatory frameworks governing shareholder rights, corporate ownership structures, minority shareholder protection, shareholder activism, fiduciary duties, corporate governance principles and directors' responsibilities. Participants will gain practical insights into shareholder voting rights, access to corporate information, dividend entitlements, participation in annual general meetings (AGMs), extraordinary general meetings (EGMs) and mechanisms for challenging unlawful corporate decisions.

The programme further examines advanced strategies for preventing, managing and resolving corporate disputes involving controlling shareholders, minority investors, directors and other corporate stakeholders. It addresses emerging corporate governance challenges, related-party transactions, oppression of minority shareholders, unfair prejudice claims, derivative actions, shareholder agreements, mergers and acquisitions disputes, and corporate litigation. Through practical case studies, simulated shareholder meetings, legal dispute analysis and alternative dispute resolution exercises, participants will develop the capacity to identify governance weaknesses, assess shareholder grievances, manage litigation risks and implement effective dispute resolution strategies.
