Advocacy Using Evaluation Evidence Training Course

Introduction

In an era of evidence-driven decision-making, advocacy organizations, governments, and development partners are increasingly required to translate evaluation findings into actionable influence. Advocacy Using Evaluation Evidence Training Course equips participants with practical skills to transform monitoring and evaluation (M&E) evidence into powerful advocacy tools that shape policies, funding priorities, and social change agendas. Participants will learn how to synthesize quantitative and qualitative evidence into compelling messages that resonate with policymakers, donors, media, and communities.

The training emphasizes results-based advocacy, data storytelling, and strategic communication using real-world evaluation data. Through applied case studies from public policy reform, social accountability, health, climate action, and governance programs, participants will gain hands-on experience in using evaluation evidence to influence legislation, institutional reforms, and program scale-up while maintaining credibility, ethical integrity, and contextual relevance.
