Airport Surface Movement Guidance Training Course

Introduction

Airport Surface Movement Guidance Training Course is designed to enhance knowledge, skills, and competencies in airport surface safety, aircraft ground movement coordination, and advanced airside management practices. With increasing global aviation demand, airports require highly trained professionals who can manage complex surface operations, prevent runway incursions, and optimize aircraft turnaround efficiency. This course focuses on Surface Movement Guidance and Control Systems (SMGCS), Advanced Surface Movement Guidance and Control Systems (A-SMGCS), air traffic coordination, apron management, taxiway operations, and international aviation safety standards.

This comprehensive training program integrates global best practices from leading airports and aviation organizations to develop expertise in surface movement planning, monitoring, communication procedures, and emergency response coordination. Participants will gain practical knowledge of ICAO standards, airport operational safety, intelligent surveillance technologies, and collaborative decision-making approaches required for modern airport environments. The course prepares aviation professionals to improve operational reliability, enhance passenger experience, and support safer and more efficient airport operations.
