Asset Pricing Economics Training Course

Introduction

Asset Pricing Economics Training Course provides a comprehensive foundation in modern asset pricing theory, financial economics, investment analysis, and quantitative valuation techniques. The course explores how financial assets are priced under uncertainty, focusing on risk-return relationships, market equilibrium, portfolio choice, consumption-based asset pricing, arbitrage pricing, and asset valuation. Participants will develop practical knowledge of Capital Asset Pricing Model (CAPM), Arbitrage Pricing Theory (APT), efficient markets, factor models, bond pricing, equity valuation, derivatives pricing, and behavioral finance. The training integrates economic theory with quantitative methods to strengthen financial decision-making and investment strategy development.

The course also examines contemporary asset pricing challenges involving financial markets, macroeconomic conditions, market volatility, interest rates, inflation, liquidity, systematic risk, and investor behavior. Through practical exercises and global case studies, participants will learn to evaluate asset-pricing models, interpret financial market data, estimate risk premiums, construct portfolios, and assess investment opportunities. The program is designed to strengthen analytical capabilities for economists, financial professionals, investment managers, policymakers, researchers, and organizations seeking evidence-based approaches to valuation, portfolio management, and financial risk assessment.
