Child-Friendly City Planning Training Course

Introduction

Child-Friendly City Planning is an increasingly important approach to urban development that places children's rights, safety, wellbeing, participation, accessibility, and healthy development at the center of planning and decision-making. Child-Friendly City Planning Training Course provides a practical and strategic framework for professionals seeking to integrate child-responsive urban planning, inclusive public spaces, safe mobility, climate resilience, social infrastructure, and equitable service delivery into city development processes. Participants will explore child-friendly urban design, spatial planning, pedestrian and cycling infrastructure, road safety, housing, schools, parks, healthcare access, environmental quality, and disaster resilience while examining how cities can create healthier and more inclusive environments for children of different ages and abilities.

The course also examines participatory planning and governance approaches that enable children, families, communities, planners, policymakers, developers, and civil society organizations to contribute to urban development. Participants will gain practical knowledge for conducting child-sensitive urban assessments, developing inclusive planning strategies, establishing measurable indicators, and integrating child-friendly principles into municipal development frameworks. Through international case studies and applied exercises, the course connects child-friendly city planning with sustainable development, smart-city innovation, climate action, social inclusion, and the Sustainable Development Goals, particularly Sustainable Development Goal 11 on sustainable cities and communities.

Course Objectives

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Understand advanced principles of child-friendly city planning and child-responsive urban development.
- Apply child-centered spatial planning and inclusive urban design approaches.
- Integrate children's rights into municipal planning, policies, and development frameworks.
- Design safer pedestrian, cycling, transport, and school-mobility systems.
- Develop inclusive parks, playgrounds, streets, and public spaces.
- Apply climate-resilient and environmentally sustainable planning for children.
- Assess accessibility and universal design for children with diverse abilities.
- Strengthen child and community participation in urban decision-making.
- Apply geographic information systems and spatial data to child-friendly planning.
- Develop effective child-friendly housing and social infrastructure strategies.
- Establish monitoring, evaluation, and child-friendly city performance indicators.
- Strengthen partnerships among governments, communities, private sector, and development organizations.
- Develop practical strategies for implementing and financing child-friendly urban development initiatives.
