Electrification of Oil and Gas Facilities Training Course

Introduction

Electrification of Oil and Gas Facilities Training Course provides a comprehensive understanding of the technologies, engineering principles, design strategies, and operational practices required to transition oil and gas facilities toward efficient, reliable, low-carbon, and digitally enabled electrical systems. As the energy industry accelerates decarbonization, energy transition, net-zero operations, electrification, renewable energy integration, energy efficiency, and emissions reduction, oil and gas companies are increasingly replacing conventional mechanical, hydraulic, and fossil-fuel-driven equipment with advanced electrical solutions. This course explores facility electrification, electrical power systems, power generation, grid integration, electrical drives, motor systems, variable frequency drives (VFDs), electrified compressors, pumps, heating systems, battery energy storage, microgrids, and renewable power integration across upstream, midstream, and downstream operations.

Participants will develop practical capabilities to assess electrification opportunities, select appropriate technologies, develop electrical load profiles, perform power system studies, evaluate reliability and resilience, and design cost-effective electrification strategies. The course also addresses hazardous-area electrical systems, electrical safety, protection and coordination, power quality, cybersecurity, energy management, digitalization, and lifecycle economics. Through practical exercises and industry-based case studies, participants will learn how electrification can improve energy efficiency, operational reliability, asset performance, maintenance optimization, emissions reduction, and total cost of ownership, while supporting corporate ESG objectives and net-zero targets.

Course Duration

5 days
