Forced Evictions, Resettlement and Urban Planning Training Course

Introduction

Forced Evictions, Resettlement and Urban Planning Training Course provides comprehensive, practical knowledge on responsible urban development, land governance, displacement management, resettlement planning, housing rights, and inclusive spatial planning. The course examines the legal, social, economic, environmental, and institutional dimensions of forced evictions and involuntary resettlement while equipping participants with modern tools for urban planning, stakeholder engagement, compensation assessment, livelihood restoration, risk management, and sustainable development.

Participants will explore international standards, human-rights-based approaches, land acquisition procedures, urban regeneration, climate-resilient planning, community participation, and displacement safeguards. Through practical exercises and global case studies, the course develops professional capacity to design fair resettlement frameworks, minimize displacement risks, protect vulnerable communities, and integrate social safeguards into sustainable urban development and infrastructure projects.

Course Objectives

- Understand international standards governing forced evictions and involuntary resettlement.
- Apply human-rights-based approaches to urban development and land acquisition.
- Develop effective Resettlement Action Plans and displacement management frameworks.
- Strengthen stakeholder engagement and meaningful community participation.
- Apply modern urban planning and spatial development principles.
- Conduct social impact, displacement, and livelihood assessments.
- Design transparent compensation and livelihood restoration mechanisms.
- Strengthen safeguards for vulnerable and marginalized communities.
- Apply conflict-sensitive approaches to land and housing disputes.
- Integrate climate resilience, sustainability, and inclusive urban development.
- Improve monitoring, evaluation, grievance redress, and accountability systems.
