Course Curriculum & Modules

Gender in Informal Economy Training Course

Introduction

The informal economy represents a significant portion of global employment, particularly in developing regions, yet it remains under-researched in terms of gender dynamics. Women and marginalized groups are disproportionately represented in informal sectors, often facing precarious work conditions, wage gaps, limited social protections, and barriers to entrepreneurship. Understanding the intersection of gender and informal economic participation is critical for designing inclusive policies, interventions, and sustainable livelihood programs. Gender in Informal Economy Training Course provides participants with insights into the structural, social, and economic factors shaping gendered experiences in informal economies, enabling evidence-based decision-making and advocacy for equitable economic empowerment.

This training combines theoretical frameworks with practical applications, case studies, and participatory methodologies to equip participants with actionable skills. It emphasizes gender-sensitive analysis, policy formulation, and community engagement to foster resilience, equity, and social justice in informal economic settings. Participants will gain competencies in assessing informal labor markets, promoting women's entrepreneurship, and leveraging digital tools for financial inclusion, ensuring that gender-responsive strategies translate into tangible outcomes.
