Housing Data and Urban Intelligence Training Course

Introduction

Housing Data and Urban Intelligence Training Course is designed to build advanced capabilities in housing analytics, urban data management, geospatial intelligence, housing-market intelligence, demographic analysis, and evidence-based urban planning. The course explores how governments, municipalities, housing authorities, developers, financial institutions, investors, and urban development professionals can use big data, Geographic Information Systems (GIS), remote sensing, artificial intelligence, predictive analytics, and urban dashboards to understand housing demand, affordability, supply gaps, land-use patterns, population growth, infrastructure needs, and emerging urban trends.

Participants will develop practical skills for transforming complex housing and urban datasets into actionable intelligence for policy development, investment planning, affordable housing programmes, infrastructure prioritisation, and sustainable urban development. The programme also examines international best practices, data governance, housing-market forecasting, smart-city technologies, and public-private collaboration, including the role of Public-Private Partnerships (PPP) in delivering data-informed housing and urban development initiatives. Through practical exercises and global case studies, participants will learn how to support resilient, inclusive, digitally enabled, and evidence-based urban decision-making.
