Housing Project Planning and Management Training Course

Introduction

Housing Project Planning and Management Training Course provides comprehensive professional knowledge and practical skills for planning, financing, designing, implementing, monitoring, and evaluating sustainable housing projects. The course covers housing needs assessment, project feasibility, land-use planning, development control, project finance, procurement, risk management, stakeholder engagement, construction management, quality assurance, sustainability, and Public-Private Partnership approaches. Participants will develop practical capabilities for delivering affordable, inclusive, climate-resilient, and financially viable housing developments while applying modern project management methodologies and international best practices.

The training integrates strategic housing planning with project management, cost control, procurement, construction supervision, environmental and social safeguards, and performance monitoring. Participants will examine global housing development models and Public-Private Partnership case studies while learning how governments, developers, financial institutions, contractors, communities, and investors can collaborate to address housing deficits. The course emphasizes evidence-based decision-making, digital project management, sustainable construction, housing affordability, risk mitigation, and successful project delivery from concept development through completion and post-occupancy evaluation.

Course Objectives

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Apply strategic housing project planning and development principles.
- Conduct housing needs assessments and market feasibility studies.
