Course Curriculum & Modules

Hydrogen Risk Assessment Training Course

Introduction

Hydrogen Risk Assessment Training Course is designed to build professional competence in hydrogen safety, hazard identification, risk management, process safety, and emergency preparedness across the rapidly expanding hydrogen economy. As hydrogen projects grow across production, storage, transportation, fueling, mobility, and industrial applications, organizations need structured approaches for recognizing hazards and evaluating risk. The course introduces participants to the fundamental safety characteristics of hydrogen and provides a framework for applying HAZID, HAZOP, What-If analysis, Bow-Tie analysis, consequence assessment, risk matrices, safeguards, ALARP principles, and risk reduction planning. The content is aligned conceptually with current hydrogen-safety frameworks, including ISO/TS 15916:2026 and the NFPA 2:2026 Hydrogen Technologies Code, while emphasizing that applicable legislation, codes, standards, and authority requirements must always be verified for the specific facility and jurisdiction.

Through interactive learning, scenario-based exercises, workshops, case studies, group discussions, and knowledge assessments, participants develop the ability to interpret hydrogen risk information and communicate findings effectively to engineering, operations, HSE, emergency-response, and management teams. The course addresses gaseous and liquid hydrogen safety concepts, loss-of-containment scenarios, fire and explosion risk, ventilation and detection concepts, protection layers, human factors, management of change, emergency planning, and risk communication without replacing site-specific engineering or regulatory review. Current industry guidance recognizes the importance of structured risk-management approaches for hydrogen applications, while NFPA 2 covers hydrogen generation, installation, storage, piping, use, and handling.

Course Duration

5 days
