Industrial Relations in the Public Sector Training Course

Introduction

Industrial relations in the public sector have become a strategic priority in today's rapidly evolving governance and workforce environment. Public institutions are facing increasing pressure to maintain organizational productivity, workforce stability, employee engagement, regulatory compliance, and service excellence while adapting to digital transformation, labor reforms, and economic restructuring. In modern public administration, industrial harmony is closely linked to transparency, accountability, workplace ethics, diversity and inclusion, employee wellbeing, and strategic human capital management.

Industrial Relations in the Public Sector Training Curse is designed to equip professionals with practical knowledge, strategic negotiation skills, labor law expertise, conflict resolution techniques, and workforce engagement strategies required to manage complex employment relations in government entities and public institutions. The program integrates contemporary themes such as digital HR transformation, employment governance, union-management collaboration, workforce resilience, organizational change management, employee relations analytics, grievance handling, occupational health and safety, and public sector leadership.
