Maritime Business Intelligence Training Course

Introduction

The global maritime industry generates vast volumes of data from shipping operations, ports, vessels, cargo movements, logistics networks, trade flows, fuel consumption, freight markets, and maritime security systems. Maritime Business Intelligence (BI) has become an essential capability for shipping companies, port authorities, logistics providers, maritime regulators, and maritime service organizations seeking to transform complex data into actionable intelligence. Maritime Business Intelligence Training Course equips participants with practical knowledge and analytical skills to collect, manage, analyze, visualize, and interpret maritime data for improved strategic decision-making, operational efficiency, commercial performance, and competitive advantage.

The course explores the application of modern business intelligence tools, data analytics, dashboards, performance measurement, predictive analytics, and market intelligence within the maritime and shipping industry. Participants will learn how to develop maritime Key Performance Indicators (KPIs), analyze shipping and port performance, monitor global trade trends, evaluate freight markets, identify operational risks, and create interactive business intelligence dashboards. Through practical exercises and real-world case studies, participants will gain the skills needed to support data-driven decision-making across ports, shipping companies, maritime logistics, supply chains, and the broader blue economy.
