Maritime Public Policy Training Course

Introduction

Maritime Public Policy is increasingly critical to the effective governance, regulation, sustainability, security, and economic development of the global maritime sector. As international trade, port development, blue economy initiatives, climate change, maritime security threats, and technological transformation continue to reshape the shipping industry, governments and maritime institutions require professionals with advanced knowledge of maritime policy formulation, implementation, monitoring, and evaluation. Maritime Public Policy Training Course equips participants with the knowledge and practical skills required to understand and influence policies governing shipping, ports, maritime transport, fisheries, marine environmental protection, maritime security, and ocean governance.

The course provides an in-depth examination of international maritime governance frameworks, maritime legislation, policy analysis, regulatory development, stakeholder engagement, and evidence-based decision-making. Participants will explore the roles of governments, maritime authorities, international organizations, port authorities, shipping companies, coastal communities, and private-sector stakeholders in shaping maritime policy. Through practical case studies and policy simulations, participants will gain hands-on skills in designing effective maritime policies that promote sustainable shipping, maritime safety, economic competitiveness, environmental protection, and inclusive blue economy development.

Learning Objectives
