Mature Field Revitalization and Recovery Optimization Training Course

Introduction

Mature Field Revitalization and Recovery Optimization Training Course is designed to equip oil and gas professionals with advanced technical knowledge and practical strategies for extending the productive life of mature oil and gas fields. As conventional reservoirs experience declining production, increasing water cut, rising operating costs, and reduced natural reservoir energy, operators must adopt innovative mature field redevelopment strategies, enhanced oil recovery (EOR), reservoir performance optimization, production enhancement, and asset life extension techniques. This specialized training course explores the latest approaches to identifying remaining hydrocarbon potential, improving reservoir sweep efficiency, optimizing well productivity, and maximizing ultimate recovery from aging assets. Participants will gain insights into reservoir characterization, production decline analysis, integrated asset modeling, well intervention planning, artificial lift optimization, and data-driven reservoir management to support sustainable and commercially viable field redevelopment.

The course also focuses on digital oilfield technologies, artificial intelligence (AI), predictive analytics, advanced reservoir surveillance, waterflood optimization, infill drilling, and recovery factor improvement to help organizations unlock stranded reserves and improve operational efficiency. Through practical exercises, real-world industry examples, and technical case studies, participants will learn how to evaluate redevelopment opportunities, prioritize capital investments, reduce lifting costs, and improve field economics under changing market conditions. Particular attention is given to balancing production gains, reservoir integrity, operational reliability, emissions reduction, and long-term asset value. By combining established petroleum engineering principles with modern optimization technologies, this course enables professionals to develop actionable mature field revitalization plans, improve recovery efficiency, and extend the economic life of aging oil and gas assets.
