Mine Waste Management Training Course

Introduction

Mine waste management is a critical discipline within modern mining operations, focusing on the safe, sustainable, and compliant handling of waste materials such as tailings, waste rock, and process residues. With increasing global scrutiny on ESG (Environmental, Social & Governance) performance, climate resilience, and environmental accountability, mining companies are under pressure to adopt advanced tailings management systems, acid mine drainage (AMD) prevention strategies, and integrated waste reduction frameworks aligned with GISTM (Global Industry Standard on Tailings Management) and ISO 14001 environmental management systems.

This training course provides a comprehensive, competency-based approach to mine waste management, integrating engineering principles, geotechnical stability, environmental risk assessment, and sustainable mine closure planning. Participants will gain practical insights into tailings storage facility (TSF) design, circular economy applications in mining, and real-world disaster case studies such as Brumadinho and Samarco dam failures. Mine Waste Management Training Course is designed to equip professionals with cutting-edge skills in waste optimization, regulatory compliance, environmental remediation, and digital monitoring technologies for safer and more sustainable mining operations.
