Miscible Gas Injection and WAG Optimization Training Course

Introduction

Miscible Gas Injection and WAG Optimization Training Course is designed to equip oil and gas professionals with advanced technical knowledge and practical skills in enhanced oil recovery (EOR), miscible gas flooding, water-alternating-gas (WAG) injection, reservoir engineering, and production optimization. This course explores the fundamental principles of miscibility, minimum miscibility pressure (MMP), gas displacement mechanisms, phase behavior, reservoir fluid characterization, and gas injection design. Participants will examine the application of carbon dioxide (CO_2), hydrocarbon gas, and other suitable injection gases in improv and mobilizing residual oil. The training also covers reservoir simulation, compositional modeling, pressure maintenance, injection surveillance, and data-driven reservoir management, enabling participants to evaluate the technical and economic feasibility of miscible gas injection projects across different reservoir conditions.

The course further emphasizes WAG injection optimization, gas mobility control, conformance management, breakthrough prevention, and integrated field development planning. Participants will learn how to optimize water-to-gas ratios, injection cycle durations, slug sizes, operating pressures, and injection rates to improve sweep efficiency while managing gas channeling, early breakthrough, and operational costs. Practical exercises and industry-based case studies will demonstrate how reservoir simulation, production history matching, pressure-transient analysis, and performance monitoring can support more effective injection strategies. The program also introduces CO_2-EOR, carbon storage opportunities, low-carbon oilfield development, and digital reservoir opt relationship between recovery enhancement and emissions management. By the end of the training, participants will be better equipped to design, assess, and optimize miscible gas injection and WAG projects that deliver improved oil recovery, operational efficiency, and long-term reservoir value.
