Net-Zero City Planning Strategies Training Course

Introduction

Net-Zero City Planning Strategies Training Course provides a comprehensive framework for developing climate-resilient, low-carbon, resource-efficient, and sustainable urban environments. The course examines advanced net-zero planning strategies, urban decarbonization, renewable energy integration, sustainable mobility, green infrastructure, circular economy principles, climate adaptation, smart-city technologies, and carbon-neutral development. Participants will explore practical approaches for reducing urban greenhouse-gas emissions while improving energy efficiency, environmental quality, economic resilience, and quality of life.

The programme combines strategic planning tools, emissions assessment, climate action planning, sustainable land-use management, green building strategies, clean transportation, urban energy systems, and nature-based solutions. Through international case studies and applied exercises, participants will learn how cities can establish measurable net-zero targets, develop implementation roadmaps, mobilize climate finance, engage stakeholders, and monitor progress. The course also addresses how governments, developers, investors, infrastructure providers, and public-private partnerships can collaborate to accelerate sustainable urban transformation.
