Petroleum Engineering Decision-Making Under Uncertainty Training Course

Introduction

Petroleum Engineering Decision-Making Under Uncertainty Training Course is designed to equip oil and gas professionals with advanced analytical skills, quantitative decision-making techniques, and risk management strategies for making reliable engineering and investment decisions in complex petroleum environments. The course explores how subsurface uncertainty, reservoir heterogeneity, geological risk, production variability, fluctuating oil prices, and operational constraints influence petroleum project outcomes. Participants will learn to apply probability theory, statistical analysis, sensitivity analysis, scenario planning, Monte Carlo simulation, Bayesian decision analysis, and decision tree modeling to evaluate competing development options and optimize technical and commercial performance. Through practical applications in reservoir engineering, drilling operations, field development planning, production optimization, and capital investment evaluation, learners will develop the ability to translate incomplete or uncertain data into actionable engineering insights.

The course also emphasizes data-driven petroleum engineering, probabilistic forecasting, uncertainty quantification, value of information (VoI), real options analysis, and risk-informed asset management to strengthen strategic decisions throughout the petroleum asset lifecycle. Participants will explore how to integrate geological, geophysical, reservoir simulation, economic, and operational data into robust decision frameworks that support effective resource allocation and improved project resilience. Industry-based case studies will demonstrate how petroleum organizations can compare alternative development scenarios, assess downside risks, quantify economic exposure, and identify opportunities to maximize expected value under uncertainty. By the end of the training, participants will be better prepared to make defensible engineering recommendations, communicate uncertainty to stakeholders, improve investment decisions, and support sustainable value creation across upstream oil and gas projects.

Course Duration

5 days
