Petroleum Engineering for Energy Transition Projects Training Course

Introduction

Petroleum Engineering for Energy Transition Projects Training Course is designed to equip oil and gas professionals with the technical expertise, strategic insights, and innovative problem-solving skills required to navigate the global shift toward a low-carbon energy future. This comprehensive training course explores how established petroleum engineering principles including reservoir characterization, drilling engineering, production optimization, fluid flow, well integrity, and asset management can be applied to emerging energy transition projects. Participants will examine energy transition technologies, low-carbon engineering solutions, emissions reduction strategies, digital transformation, lifecycle carbon management, and sustainable energy project development to understand how engineering decisions influence operational performance, environmental sustainability, and long-term business value.

Through industry case studies, engineering simulations, group discussions, and project-based exercises, learners will explore opportunities to repurpose existing petroleum infrastructure, improve energy efficiency, reduce operational emissions, and integrate emerging low-carbon technologies into traditional upstream operations. The programme highlights the growing importance of ESG performance, climate risk assessment, lifecycle assessment (LCA), carbon accounting, energy systems integration, and digital oilfield technologies in modern engineering practice. By the end of the training, participants will be better prepared to contribute to energy transition strategies, lead multidisciplinary engineering teams, evaluate low-carbon investment opportunities, and develop resilient petroleum assets that support the evolving global energy landscape.

Course Duration

5 days
