Public Health Advocacy Campaigns Training Course

Introduction

Public Health Advocacy Campaigns Training Course to equip participants with advanced competencies in strategic health communication, behavioral change advocacy, stakeholder engagement, and evidence-based public health messaging. In an era driven by digital health transformation, social determinants of health, and global health security, effective advocacy is essential for influencing decision-makers and improving population health outcomes.

This program integrates modern approaches such as data-driven advocacy, community mobilization, risk communication, and digital public health campaigning. Participants will learn how to design and implement impactful campaigns that address pressing issues such as HIV/AIDS, malaria, maternal health, non-communicable diseases (NCDs), mental health awareness, vaccination uptake, and climate-health intersections. The course emphasizes real-world application through case studies, simulations, and campaign design labs aligned with global best practices.
