Public Opinion and National Security Policy Training Course

Introduction

Public opinion plays a critical role in shaping national security policy, influencing government decision-making, policy legitimacy, and operational effectiveness. Understanding the dynamics of citizen perceptions, media framing, political narratives, and social trust is essential for policymakers, strategists, and security practitioners. Public Opinion and National Security Policy Training Course provides an in-depth exploration of the intersection between public opinion and national security policy formulation, offering tools and frameworks to analyze trends, measure public sentiment, and predict the impact of policy decisions on societal cohesion, public trust, and security outcomes.

Participants will examine how public opinion is shaped by domestic and international events, information campaigns, and social media ecosystems, and how it can both enable and constrain strategic initiatives. The course covers methodologies for gauging public attitudes, assessing risk perception, integrating citizen feedback into policy design, and evaluating the effectiveness of national security communication strategies. Through case studies and practical exercises, learners will acquire skills to leverage public sentiment for enhanced policy legitimacy, crisis management, and sustainable national security outcomes.
