Resource-Efficient Cities Training Course

Introduction

Resource-Efficient Cities Training Course provides a comprehensive framework for understanding how cities can optimize the use of energy, water, materials, land, infrastructure, and financial resources while improving urban resilience, sustainability, productivity, and quality of life. The course examines resource efficiency, circular economy, sustainable urban development, green infrastructure, smart-city solutions, climate resilience, sustainable mobility, waste management, water efficiency, renewable energy, and low-carbon urban planning. Participants will explore practical strategies for reducing resource consumption, operational costs, environmental impacts, and greenhouse gas emissions while supporting inclusive and economically productive urban growth.

The course integrates international best practices, urban resource management tools, sustainability indicators, lifecycle thinking, digital technologies, environmental management, and evidence-based planning. Through practical exercises and global case studies, participants will examine how leading cities have implemented resource-efficient systems across buildings, transport, energy, water, waste, and public infrastructure. The course also strengthens institutional capacity to develop resource-efficient urban policies, investment strategies, partnerships, monitoring systems, and implementation frameworks aligned with the Sustainable Development Goals and climate-action priorities.
