Security Dynamics in the Sahel Region Training Course

Introduction

Security Dynamics in the Sahel Region Training Course addresses the complex and evolving security challenges facing West Africa's Sahel region. This course is designed to provide policymakers, security professionals, and development practitioners with a comprehensive understanding of the multifaceted threats, including terrorism, violent extremism, climate change, and weak governance. By exploring the intricate interplay of geopolitical, socio-economic, and environmental factors, participants will gain the analytical skills and strategic insights necessary for effective crisis management and conflict resolution. The curriculum emphasizes integrated, multi-dimensional approaches that go beyond traditional military solutions to build sustainable peace and stability.

The training focuses on practical skills and policy-oriented solutions, equipping participants to design and implement effective counter-terrorism strategies, security sector reforms, and community-led initiatives. It provides a deep dive into the root causes of instability, such as poverty, illicit trafficking, and food insecurity, while also examining the impact of geopolitical competition and the role of international and regional actors. Through a combination of expert-led sessions, interactive workshops, and real-world case studies, the course aims to foster enhanced regional cooperation and build a network of professionals committed to fostering peace, security, and sustainable development in the Sahel.

Course Duration

5 days

Course Objectives

- Analyze the geopolitical shifts and their impact on Sahelian security.
- Assess the drivers of violent extremism (VE) and radicalization.
