Social Performance Management in Microfinance Training Course

Introduction

Social Performance Management (SPM) in microfinance is a critical pillar for ensuring that financial services are delivered ethically, responsibly, and with measurable impact on low-income and vulnerable populations. As global development agendas prioritize social inclusion, client protection, and sustainable growth, microfinance institutions must integrate strong SPM systems to align their operations with mission-driven outcomes. Social Performance Management in Microfinance Training Course provides participants with practical frameworks, emerging best practices, and digital tools that enhance social impact measurement, client-centric product design, and responsible financial service delivery.

The training also equips participants with advanced skills for monitoring social indicators, managing ESG goals, strengthening governance, and applying global standards such as the SPI4, Universal Standards, and Client Protection Principles. With an emphasis on data-driven decision-making, transparency, and accountability, this course enables microfinance professionals to build institutions that are resilient, ethical, and effective in improving the lives of underserved communities.
