Strategic Health Planning Training Course

Introduction

Strategic Health Planning Training Course is designed to strengthen the capacity of healthcare leaders, policymakers, public health professionals, and development practitioners in strategic healthcare management, health systems strengthening, healthcare innovation, and sustainable healthcare delivery. In today's dynamic healthcare environment, organizations face increasing challenges related to universal health coverage (UHC), digital health transformation, healthcare financing, disease outbreaks, climate-related health risks, and rising patient expectations. This course provides participants with practical tools, strategic frameworks, and evidence-based approaches to improve healthcare planning, policy implementation, healthcare governance, and institutional performance.

The course integrates modern and trending concepts including artificial intelligence in healthcare, health informatics, predictive analytics, healthcare quality improvement, pandemic preparedness, healthcare leadership, and data-driven decision-making. Participants will gain hands-on experience in developing strategic health plans, conducting health needs assessments, managing healthcare resources, strengthening monitoring and evaluation systems, and implementing resilient healthcare strategies aligned with Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Through practical case studies, simulations, workshops, and collaborative learning, the course equips participants with the skills needed to drive healthcare transformation, improve population health outcomes, and achieve organizational excellence.

Course Duration
