Survey Design for Mining Research Training Course

Introduction

Survey Design for Mining Research Training Course is developed to equip participants with advanced skills in geological data collection, mining feasibility surveys, mineral exploration analytics, and spatial data interpretation. The course integrates modern GIS applications, remote sensing technologies, geostatistical modeling, and digital field survey techniques to enhance decision-making in mining research environments. Participants will gain practical expertise in designing robust survey frameworks that improve accuracy, efficiency, and compliance in mineral resource evaluation.

With increasing demand for critical minerals, sustainable mining practices, ESG compliance, and data-driven exploration strategies, this training bridges the gap between academic research and real-world mining operations. It emphasizes survey accuracy, sampling methodologies, resource estimation, and exploration risk reduction, ensuring participants are prepared for both surface and underground mining research challenges in a highly competitive global mining industry.
