Sustainable Urban Development and Housing Co-ops Training Course

Introduction

Housing cooperatives play a pivotal role in fostering inclusive, sustainable, and affordable urban development. By leveraging collective ownership models, housing co-ops address challenges of urban housing shortages, gentrification, and environmental degradation. As cities expand rapidly, the need for community-led, environmentally responsible, and economically accessible housing solutions has never been more urgent. Sustainable Urban Development and Housing Co-ops Training Course equips participants with practical tools, global insights, and innovative strategies to implement and support housing cooperatives in urban settings.

The training delves into the intersection of urban planning, cooperative governance, social equity, and climate resilience. Through real-world case studies, policy reviews, and cooperative management simulations, learners will acquire the skills to promote and lead people-centered, sustainable housing cooperatives. Whether you are an urban planner, policymaker, cooperative leader, or development practitioner, this course provides the actionable knowledge needed to empower communities and build thriving, equitable cities.
