Sustainable Urban Form and Design Training Course

Introduction

Sustainable Urban Form and Design is an advanced professional course focused on creating compact, connected, inclusive, resilient, and environmentally responsible urban environments. Sustainable Urban Form and Design Training Course explores sustainable urban planning, urban morphology, land-use integration, transit-oriented development, walkable neighborhoods, green infrastructure, climate-responsive design, mixed-use development, public realm quality, urban regeneration, and low-carbon urban growth. Participants will develop practical knowledge for shaping urban areas that improve accessibility, resource efficiency, environmental performance, social inclusion, economic vitality, and long-term urban resilience.

The course integrates contemporary sustainable design principles with practical planning tools, spatial analysis, urban design frameworks, and international best practices. Participants will examine how cities can manage urban expansion, reduce automobile dependency, strengthen public spaces, integrate nature-based solutions, improve housing and mobility, and respond to climate change. Global case studies from Copenhagen, Singapore, Curitiba, Barcelona, Melbourne, and other leading cities will provide practical examples of sustainable urban form, enabling participants to translate international lessons into effective local planning and design strategies.
