Taxation of Digital Assets, Cryptocurrency and Virtual Transactions Training Course

Introduction

Taxation of Digital Assets, Cryptocurrency and Virtual Transactions Training Course is designed to equip tax professionals, financial regulators, accountants, legal practitioners, policymakers and business executives with advanced knowledge and practical skills for managing the rapidly evolving tax implications of the digital economy. Governments and tax authorities worldwide are strengthening their approaches to digital asset taxation, focusing on tax transparency, accurate reporting, cross-border information exchange, anti-money laundering compliance and the prevention of tax evasion. This course explores emerging international tax standards, digital asset classification, cryptocurrency taxation frameworks, capital gains tax, income tax, value-added tax (VAT), withholding tax and the treatment of virtual transactions across different jurisdictions.

Participants will gain practical expertise in identifying taxable digital asset transactions, determining fair market value, calculating tax liabilities, maintaining blockchain transaction records and addressing complex tax reporting requirements. The programme examines the tax implications of cryptocurrency mining, staking rewards, token issuance, NFT trading, digital wallets, crypto exchanges, decentralized finance platforms and cross-border virtual payments. Through practical exercises, regulatory analysis and real-world case studies, participants will develop effective strategies for managing digital asset tax risks, strengthening compliance frameworks, improving tax audits and supporting responsible innovation in digital financial markets. The training provides an internationally relevant perspective, with opportunities to examine country-specific legislation and implementation challenges, including developments in African and Kenyan tax administration.
