Course Curriculum & Modules

Taxation of Non-Resident Individuals Training Course

Introduction

The global workforce and international mobility have significantly increased the number of non-resident individuals subject to taxation across different jurisdictions. Understanding how to determine residency status, source income, and apply relevant tax treaties is essential for compliance and effective tax planning. Taxation of Non-Resident Individuals Training Course offers a comprehensive exploration of the principles, rules, and practices governing the taxation of non-resident individuals, emphasizing both domestic and international tax implications.

Participants will gain in-depth knowledge of income sourcing rules, withholding tax obligations, double taxation relief, and the application of tax treaties under the OECD and UN models. The course further addresses compliance requirements, filing obligations, and practical strategies to manage cross-border taxation risks. Through illustrative examples and case studies, learners will develop the skills needed to analyze residency issues, assess tax liabilities, and ensure regulatory compliance.

Course Objectives

- Understand the fundamental principles of non-resident individual taxation.
- Identify criteria for determining tax residency status under domestic laws and treaties.
- Apply income sourcing rules for employment, investment, and business income.
- Analyze the role and application of double taxation agreements (DTAs).
- Evaluate withholding tax obligations for different income types.

- Assess compliance and filing obligations for non-resident taxpayers.
- Interpret OECD and UN model conventions in cross-border tax contexts.
- Examine the treatment of expatriates and short-term assignees.
- Develop strategies to minimize double taxation risks.
- Understand digital economy taxation implications for non-residents.
- Apply best practices for documentation and tax reporting.
- Analyze enforcement trends and dispute resolution mechanisms.
- Enhance tax advisory skills in handling international tax matters.

Organizational Benefits

- Improved compliance with international and domestic non-resident tax rules.
- Reduced exposure to penalties and double taxation disputes.
- Enhanced accuracy in determining residency and sourcing income.
- Strengthened understanding of international tax treaties and applications.
- Better management of expatriate and foreign workforce tax obligations.
- Increased efficiency in cross-border tax reporting and withholding.
- Greater capability to provide informed tax planning and advisory services.
- Enhanced reputation for compliance and international best practices.
- Minimized risks related to permanent establishment and digital taxation.
- Strengthened capacity to adapt to evolving global tax regulations.

Target Audience

- Tax consultants and advisors
- Accountants and auditors
- Corporate finance managers
- Legal and compliance officers
- International payroll specialists
- Expatriate program managers
