Program for Theory-Driven Evaluation and Data Integration Training Course

Introduction

In today’s data-driven world, organizations must adopt Theory-Driven Evaluation (TDE) and Data Integration strategies to ensure impactful decision-making, measurable outcomes, and sustainable program success. Program for Theory-Driven Evaluation and Data Integration Training Course equips participants with the skills to align evaluation frameworks with theoretical models, while seamlessly integrating qualitative and quantitative data for deeper insights. Our training empowers evaluators, program managers, policymakers, and researchers to develop robust evaluations that are evidence-based, results-oriented, and capable of driving strategic change in complex systems.

The program addresses the increasing demand for evaluation capacity building, mixed-methods research, and data synthesis techniques across sectors like health, education, development, and social policy. Participants will gain expertise in linking program theories to data analysis, interpreting integrated data for policy influence, and applying real-world case studies to enhance impact evaluation, data visualization, and evidence-informed policy making. The course blends theory, practice, and technology, offering participants tools to master contemporary evaluation and data integration trends.
