Training Course on Marine Resources

Introduction

The vast blue economy offers a wealth of marine resources ranging from fisheries and offshore minerals to renewable energy and marine biotechnology. As global attention shifts towards sustainability and climate resilience, the efficient management, conservation, and exploitation of marine resources have become critical. This course is designed to empower participants with cutting-edge skills and knowledge to address pressing challenges in marine resource management, conservation policies, and sustainable exploitation, aligning with international frameworks like the UN SDG 14 – Life Below Water.

Participants will be equipped with the tools to assess, develop, and implement sustainable marine strategies, improve compliance with maritime regulations, and boost economic opportunities through innovative ocean-based solutions. Whether for national planning, community conservation, or private-sector investment, this program bridges knowledge gaps and fosters blue economy leadership for a sustainable future.
