Training Course on Packaging and Shipping Infectious Materials In Nairobi, Mombasa; Kenya

Not only is it important to know how to protect yourself and others from the dangers associated with exposure to infectious materials, but regulatory agencies require certified training for anyone who is involved in packaging and shipping highly infectious materials. This Packaging and Shipping Infectious Materials course will provide you with the certified training that you need to perform these tasks safely. Learn to classify infectious materials so that they are packaged and shipped properly, practice packaging various substances through interactive participation in real-life scenarios, and finally, demonstrate your understanding of packaging and shipping infectious materials and receive a certificate of training.

Duration

5 days

Who Should Attend?

This course is designed for health care personnel who package, ship, and transport Division 6.2 hazardous materials such as patient specimens and cultures.

Course Objectives

i. Identify who must receive training in packaging and shipping infectious materials, what must be included in the training, and what records must be maintained.

ii. Identify the classifications of hazardous materials and define Division 6.2 infectious materials.

iii. Identify specimens that are classified as Category A or Category B infectious substances and specimens that are exempt substances.

iv. Determine the type of packaging that is necessary based on the type of specimen, the classification of the specimen, the size of the specimen, the temperature at which the specimen must be maintained during shipment, the specimen components, and the mode of transportation.

v. Determine the labels and markings that are required for packages containing category A or category B substances.

vi. Discuss the importance of security awareness when packaging and shipping hazardous materials.
