Training Course on Participatory Climate Risk Assessment for Farming Communities

Introduction

Climate change has emerged as one of the most critical challenges affecting global agriculture, posing significant risks to farming communities. In response, Participatory Climate Risk Assessment (PCRA) has become an essential approach to building local resilience, promoting sustainable agriculture, and enhancing adaptive capacity. Training Course on Participatory Climate Risk Assessment for Farming Communities is designed to empower stakeholders, particularly in vulnerable rural regions, to collaboratively identify, evaluate, and mitigate climate-related threats through community-based tools and strategies. Emphasizing inclusivity, gender equity, and knowledge co-production, the course integrates scientific assessments with local insights, ensuring that no voice is left unheard in the climate dialogue.

The course also highlights cutting-edge climate-smart agriculture, resilience planning, risk communication, and adaptive farming techniques, all within a participatory framework. Participants will gain practical skills in climate data interpretation, vulnerability mapping, livelihood risk profiling, and the integration of indigenous knowledge with scientific models. Through real-life case studies and hands-on exercises, farming communities, policymakers, and facilitators will be equipped to co-develop action plans that respond to both present and future climate threats.
