Training Course on Policy and Governance of Agricultural Water Resources

Introduction

Water governance in agriculture plays a crucial role in enhancing food security, promoting climate-smart practices, and ensuring sustainable rural development. As climate change intensifies and water scarcity grows, effective agricultural water policy and governance systems are needed to optimize water use, mitigate conflicts, and empower stakeholders, including farmers, government agencies, and private sectors. Training Course on Policy and Governance of Agricultural Water Resources is designed to equip participants with cutting-edge skills and knowledge on designing, implementing, and evaluating agricultural water governance frameworks in line with sustainable development goals (SDGs), integrated water resources management (IWRM), and inclusive policies.

This highly practical and interactive training focuses on the regulatory frameworks, institutional coordination, and community-based water governance approaches that shape decision-making around water allocation, irrigation management, and policy reform. Through expert-led modules, case studies, and group exercises, participants will engage with global best practices and localized solutions tailored to water governance challenges in both rain-fed and irrigated farming systems.

Training Objectives

By the end of this training, participants will be able to:

- Understand the fundamentals of agricultural water governance.
- Analyze policy frameworks for water resource management in agriculture.

- Assess the institutional roles and responsibilities in water governance systems.
- Design stakeholder engagement strategies for inclusive water policy development.
- Examine the impact of climate change on agricultural water policies.
- Apply integrated water resources management (IWRM) principles in agriculture.
- Evaluate public-private partnerships (PPPs) in water infrastructure.
- Explore legal and regulatory instruments for water rights and access.
- Implement gender-sensitive approaches in water governance.
- Monitor and evaluate policy outcomes and governance performance.
- Integrate technology and innovation in water governance strategies.
- Learn from case studies and international best practices in water governance.
- Promote sustainable water use in agricultural production systems.

Target Audiences
