Course Curriculum & Modules

Training Course on Urban Flood Management and Disaster Risk Mitigation; Nairobi and Mombasa; Kenya

The course is aimed at providing the most up-to-date information on the topic of urban flood modelling and disaster management and to enable participants to be more effective in applying modelling tools and techniques for urban flood management. The purpose of this course is to introduce current theory and practice of flood risk estimation and modelling of floods in urban areas. It provides hands-on practice with industrial standard software.

Who Should Attend?

The course is designed for professionals (engineers, scientists and managers/planners) active in the urban water sector, especially those involved in using simulation models for planning of drainage networks and water-related disaster management activities.

Duration

5 Days

Course Objectives

At the end of the course, the participants should be able to:

i. Develop understanding of how to use the models to assess the performance of existing systems and how to design the new ones within the context of different flood risks (pluvial, fluvial, coastal and flash floods)

ii. Learn how to produce different flood risk maps in a GIS environment and how to calculate different types of flood damages, and

iii. Develop understanding of structural and non-structural flood resilience measures such as, conventional and innovative structures, early warning sys

Course Content
