Urban Data Science Training Course

Introduction

Urban Data Science combines data analytics, geographic information systems, artificial intelligence, machine learning, urban informatics, and spatial analysis to transform complex urban data into actionable insights for sustainable city planning and development. Urban Data Science Training Course provides practical knowledge in urban data analytics, geospatial intelligence, predictive modelling, smart city technologies, mobility analytics, demographic analysis, and evidence-based urban policy. Participants will develop skills for integrating diverse datasets, identifying urban patterns, visualizing spatial information, and applying advanced analytical techniques to address challenges related to urban growth, infrastructure, housing, transportation, environmental sustainability, and public services.

The course emphasizes data-driven urban planning, smart city innovation, digital transformation, climate resilience, and sustainable urban development. Participants will explore real-world applications of urban data science and examine global case studies involving smart mobility, urban digital twins, spatial planning, environmental monitoring, and data-enabled public services. The programme also demonstrates how urban data can support investment decisions, governance, Public-Private Partnerships, infrastructure planning, and sustainable development strategies while improving the efficiency, resilience, inclusiveness, and liveability of cities.
