Course Curriculum & Modules

Workplace Health Promotion Training Course

Introduction

Workplace Health Promotion (WHP) is a strategic, evidence-based approach aimed at improving the physical, mental, and social well-being of employees within an organization. In today's fast-evolving corporate environment, organizations are increasingly prioritizing employee wellness programs, occupational health safety, mental health at work, and corporate wellness strategies to boost productivity, reduce absenteeism, and enhance engagement. WHP integrates preventive healthcare, healthy workplace design, stress management, and behavioral change interventions to create a thriving workforce aligned with organizational success.

As global workplaces adapt to hybrid work models and rising psychosocial risks, Workplace Health Promotion has become a critical pillar in human capital development, employee engagement strategies, and sustainable workplace productivity systems. Workplace Health Promotion Training Course equips participants with practical tools, frameworks, and case-based learning to design and implement impactful wellness initiatives. It also emphasizes data-driven decision-making, ESG-aligned workplace health strategies, and modern wellness technologies to ensure long-term organizational resilience.
